There Is No Let Up to Fruit Canning

You begin with the fruit in warm weather, and there is no end till the chilly days of fall.

Cherries come with the birds. Berries and plums are ready for the kettle while the sealing wax on the cherry cans are still warm. Peaches and pears, apples, jellies—in fact nearly all the juicy products of summer claim their share of stewing, heating, sugaring and "cellaring."

And all the time it's hot!

And growing hotter!

You need help in this hot summer weather, more than any other time during the year.

A Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet which bring your utensils and work to your finger tips, and shortens these hot tasks, is a blessing.

You ladies who come in early and have your cabinet delivered before you are tired out with this work (without having to worry about the pay), will confer a lasting blessing on your own heads.

CAPTURE ALLEGED THIEF.

Burlington Officer Had Tussle With Man in Freight Yard.

Burlington, July 7.—A hard looking ticket, named Thomas Riley, was captured last night by Police Officer Brodie while trying to tap one of the refrigerator cars in the Rutland freight yard. Riley was with two others, who made their escape. They were heard rummaging about the yard by a conductor, who awoke in one of the trains which leave early in the morning. He notified the police office and they sent Brodie to the yard. When Riley was taken on the case, he was put in the jail, where he was finally landed in jail, after he had been thrown two or three times. It is thought that the gang is one which has made several attempts to break into cars of late in search of beer. The rails have been found broken on several former occasions, but the contents of the cars were found to be intact as they did not contain the much-wanted article.

Magazine Review

"The Foreign Policy of the United States" is the title of a timely article in the July number of The North American Review, by Charles Johnston, in which he reviews the attitude of our government toward foreign powers since Mr. Hay was secretary of state. He then takes up for consideration the details of the foreign policy under the new administration; the dividing of the foreign affairs in four great divisions, according to geographical and political relations; and the reorganization of the diplomatic service which requires examinations for the candidate similar to those of the civil service. He summarizes:

"In general, I think it might almost be said to be a new axiom of the present administration that the department of state should endeavor in all cases to give full support to legitimate and beneficial American enterprises in foreign countries, at the same time scrutinizing such enterprises in order to arrive at a conservative decision as to whether they are worthy of support, and as to the degree of support which would be justified by the extent of their real benefit to the United States, and by their relation to the important policies of the government. This attitude pays new life and energy into what might often be merely formal acts and relations. It is likely to be of real and lasting benefit to society foreign countries, which will be able, in safe and conservative ways, to profit by American organizing power, while at the same time stimulating American commerce, enterprise and influence. A policy of greater energy and initiative will take the place of what was perhaps the too cautious and negative foreign policy of this country."
